THE WASHINGTON

KHARTOUM, May 23 (Agencies) - French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing arrived Wednesday for a one-day visit during which he held talks on relations with Africa and the Arab world with the chairman of the Organization of African Unity (OAU), Sudan President Jaafar Numeiri.

President and Mrs. Giscard d'Estaing were welcomed by President and Mrs. Numeiri when their airliner landed from Rwanda, where the French leader had taken part in a Franco-African summit conference.

The French and Sudanese Presidents then held two sessions. The French leader and his wife leave for Paris Wednesday night.

ALGIERS, May 23 (R) — South Yemen President Abdul Fattah Ismail left Wednesday after a four-day official visit to Algeria, the Algerie Presse Service reported.

Ismail had talks with Algerian President Chadli Benjedid and other Algerian officials, mainly on current Middle East issues, it said. He also visited the Algerian town of Tlemcen and natural gas plants at Arzew.

Novice Joe Clark beats Trudeau in Canada race

OTTAWA, May 23 (R) - Political Novice Joe Clark and his progressive Conservative Party ended the 11-year rule of Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau early Wednesday.

Trudeau, one of the Western world's most experienced leaders, conceded defeat and said he would ask Canada's governor-general within the next two or three days to appoint Clark, 39, as prime minister.

Clark will head a minority government. Results from Tuesday's general election left the Progressive Conservatives six seats short of an absolute majority in the House of Commons.

Trudeau, moist-eyed, appeared before hundreds of his loyal followers. Rejecting their cries of "no. no," he declared that he would step down and become leader of the opposition.

"I think it is our duty to hand over to Mr. Clark ... As for me, I'll be a pretty good leader of the opposition. This country will need us in the future," he Clark, 20 years junior to Trudeau will be the youngest leader in Canada's 112-year history and the youngest leader of a major Western country. He has been in elected politics for only seven years and leader of his party for only three. He has no governmental or business experience. With a few results for the 282-seat house still to be declared, the Conservatives had won or were leading in 134, Trudeau's Liberals had 116, the New Democratic Party 26 and the Quebec-based Social Credit party six. In the last parliament, which had 18 fewer seats than the new one, Liberals held a 133-98 edge over the Conservatives.

His Liberals were decimated in Ontario, the country's most populous province, where eight of his 32 cabinet ministers were defeated. But the Liberals swept French-speaking Quebec, leaving the national political line-up largely polarized along a language divide.

This increased Clark's future problems in trying to prevent Quebec from breaking away to become an independent nation.

Clark, in his victory speech, held out an olive branch to Quebec, saying that he wanted to make his country of two languages and two cultures a model for the world.

I want to keep this nation together," he declared to cheers from his supporters.

'I remain (determined) to form a genuinely national government representative of all corners of Canada. Quebec will not feel isolated in a Clark government."

Clark's immediate problem will be to canvass support from minority parties in parliament to form government with majority support.

There was some speculation that he might turn to the tiny French Canadian Social Credit Party, a right-wing group which wants Quebec to stay in Canada. On the other hand, party leaders said he might go ahead and form a minority government, trusting that the other parties would shy away from forcing another general election. Clark promised to start work Thursday on plans

Kingdom, Morocco reaffirm need to regain Jerusalem

King Khaled returned home Wednesday after a five-day visit to Morocco as guest of King Hassan. During the visit the two monarchs had political talks on Sunday and Tuesday, devoted mainly to the questions of Jerusalem, Palestine and the Middle East in general.

In a joint communique issued Wednesday Saudi Arabia and Morocco reaffirmed their adherence to the Baghdad summit conference resolutions and their commitment to the Palestinian question and Arab sovereignty over the holy city of Jerusalem.

The two countries reiterated their determination to double their efforts to help liberate the occupied lands including Jerusalem, and help the Palestinian people regain their rights. The two countries declared that the Palestinian people under the leadership of the Palestine Liberation Organization have a right to establish an independent state in their country.

The two countries also agreed to coordinate their actions with regard to the application of the resolutions taken by the Arab foreign and economy ministers in Baghdad and concurred on the need for the Arab League to take an effective part in carrying them

With regard to Lebanon the two countries reiterated their dedication to the territorial integrity of Lebanon and their support for the legal government and national reconciliation. They expressed their "deep concern and denunciation of Israeli designs which threaten Lebanon's unity, security and stability, and expressed hopes that tranquility will be restored to the country 'so that, Lebanon may remain, as it had always been, a land of tolrance and peaceful coexistence between various religions and sects."

Saudi Arabia and Morocco pledged to bolster Islamic solidarity so that the Islamic bloc of countries "may contribute to world civilization in the pursuit of peace. progress and prosperity."

The communique added that the two countries would coordinate their work on the resolutions of the Islamic foreign ministers conference especially those dealing with the Jerusalem committee which is presided over by King Hassan" so that it may carry out its work more effectively in the service of Arab right."

King Khaled praised King Hassan for accepting to preside over the committee and expressed his appreciation of his determination to do his utmost to achieve its goals".

The two leaders pledged to consolidate Arab-African cooperation. They condemned racial discrimination in the continent, and held identical views on international issues and reaffirmed their belief in the United Nations and Arab League charters and that of the Organization of Islamic Conference and the policy of nonalignment. # Riyadh's housing scheme gets go ahead after delay

By A Staff Reporter

JEDDAH, May 23 - A longdelayed project to provide housmg for the poor in Riyadh is finally to go ahead but apparently on a reduced scale.

The scheme, which was originaily designed to house about 9,000 persons four years ago, will now accommodate about twothirds that number on completion two years from now. It will cost SR 1 billion.

Minister of Public Works and Housing Prince Miteb signed the contract Wednesday with the South Korean firm, Hanyang Housing Construction Ltd. Under the contract, Hanyang is to build 196,000 square meters.

Each block will comprise 10 storeys with six three-roomed apartments - making a total of 1,440 flats.

The scheme is part of the Ministry's 'Rush Housing Program' approved by the Council of Ministers to meet the Kingdom's drastic housing shortage four years ago. Contracts for nearly 4,000 apartments in high-rise tower blocks in Dammam and Jeddah were awarded in 1977.

The SR 2 billion Jeddah scheme, 'Jeddah Towers', is rapidly approaching completion by West German and French contractors and the SR 1.9 billion Dammam scheme, being built by Ogens of the Netherlands is following closely. Each project will provide around 2,000 flats. But the Riyadh project, which was originally to be identical, was held up because the ministry could not obtain a suitable plot of land. according to Prince Miteb.

Because of the perceived necessity for speed, the rush housing program has only minimal public services. With the easing of the burden, chiefly through massive private building, emphasis has since shifted to a general housing program which seeks to create integrated mini-cities' with their own schools, utilities and public services networks - with the Korean construction industry weeping all the contracts.

Under the general scheme, Korean firms are building 5,000 housing units on Kharj Road in

The Riyadh rush project will have more services than Jeddah and Dammam. The contracts include seven children's playgrounds, two restaurants, a mosque, five parking lots and a public park and will have its own drinking water, sewage system and electricity. Maintenance of the project will be contracted out, the minis-

But it does not include schools, clinics or a police station. Prince Miteb said that the ministry had requested expropriation of land for these from the Ministry of Finance, which handles state demands on land use. Land has recently been obtained for schools and medical facilities at Jeddah and Dammam, the minister said.

With Wednesday's award, the rush housing scheme is now completely under way and the minister . said that plans were being prepared for general housing in Mecca, Medina, Buraidah, Khafji and Qatif.

But there remains the question of allotment of the rush scheme's flats to low-income families. Prince Miteb chairs a committee preparing criteria for their allotment. He said the committee would shortly complete its report for submission to the Council of Ministers for discussion.

Wednesday's award also underlines the total domination of public housing by the Korean construction industry since Korean firms picked up more than SR 6 billion in general housing last June, Hanyang itself last week was awarded SR 1.25 billion in housing for state hospital employees in Kabul government has expressed solidarity with the Pathan and Baluch tribes which straddle the common border.

Soon after seizing power in a bloody coup in April last year, the new administration revived Afghan claims to large parts of Pakistan territory and continues to talk of historical commitments.

Pakistan is afraid that Afghanistan could stir up trouble in the sensitive tribal areas along the border.

Although Pakistan is considered to have won an earlier bout of fighting across the border in 1975, it is afraid any new fighting might eventually involve Afganistan's powerful ally to the north, the Soviet Union.

Army ruler Gen. Muhammad Zia Ul-Haq said a few days ago that Pakistan wanted friendly and brotherly relations with Afghanistan and pointed to a number of trade talks between the two countries as evidence of its goodwill.

Earlier Wednesday the Soviet Union accused Pakistan of arming Afghan rebel forces on its territory in preparation for full-scale military action against the Kabul government.

The Communist Party newspaper "Pravda" said alarming reports coming in from the Afghan-Pakistani frontier area indicated that plans were being made to launch a new rebel attack across the border to complicate what it termed "the implementation of progressive a transformations in the country."

In a wide-ranging interview with Reuters, Col. Qaddafi also charged that Egypt was planning to attack Libya.

He declared that Idi Amin, the ousted Ugandan president, had been in Libya since his overthrow last month but was now back in the north of the country preparing a guerrilla campaign against the Tanzanian-led forces which drove him from the seat of power.

And, in a surprising political statement, Qaddafi said he welcomed Britain's new Conservative government and hoped it would rebuild commercial links between the two countries.

Turkey to get U.S. $50m aid

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP) — The U.S. Senate voted 64-32 Tuesday to grant Turkey $ 50 million in emergency military aid after hearing a bipartisan band of senators portray the Turkish economy as near collapse.

Senators opposed to the move said Turkey should not be rewarded for its invasion and continued occupation of parts of Cyp-

But others said a revitalized Turkey is essential to maintain the southern flank of NATO and to protect vital American security interests in the Middle East.

'Our loyal ally is near the precipice," said Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd, who led the effort to override the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and convert the $ 50 million aid fund from a loan to an outright grant.

Byrd said the Turkish economy already is overburdened with outside loans and cannot afford a loan under any circumstances.

He said the grant is desperately needed to permit Turkey to buy spare parts and reverse the obsolescence that has grounded at least half of its air force and destroyed the usefulness of much of its tank and artillery force.

U.N. likely to urge ban of Pretoria over Namibia

(R) — The U.N. General Assembly, which Wednesday opened a week-long session on Namibia (South-West Africa), was expected to call for sanctions against South Africa for failing to implement a U.N. independence plan for the territory.

African countries have been considering calling on the Security Council to expel South Africa from the world body but African sources said this had now been dropped from the resolution being prepared.

. A final decision on sanctions will rest with the 15-nation Security Council on which the United States, Britain and France, all with important economic interests in South Africa, have veto powers. The council is likely to consider the assembly's recommendation

The session that started Wednesday was a continuation of the regular, annual 13-week assembly which adjourned last December but met for two weeks in January to deal with unfinished business.

The further resumption, to deal solely with Namibia, was scheduled on the assumption that the assembly would now either have to approve financing for a plan calling for U.N.-supervized pre-independence elections in the territory or take action against South Africa for blocking its implementation.

South Africa accepted the main points of the plan more than a year ago, but maintains that it fails to provide for U.N. monitoring of guerrilla bases of the South West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO) in Angola and other neighboring African states.

It also complains that the plan would permit SWAPO to set up bases inside Namibia after the CAPE TOWN, May 23 (R) --South African opposition parties Tuesday strongly attacked goverument proposals to curb press reports on state corruption and m.ladministration.

A government bill proposing the appointment of an advocategeneral to investigate allegations of misuse of state money would effectively prevent any reporting of suspected corruption without his permission.

Opposition leader Colin Eglin, head of the Progressive Federal Party (PFP), told parliament the government clearly intended to South Africa organized elections last December for a constituent assembly in Namibia without U.N. supervision and without the participation of SWAPO. It argued that this was not inconsistent with the U.N. independence plan, once remaining problems had been resolved.

The constituent assembly was upgraded last week to a national assembly with legislative powers.

declaration of a cease-fire in the

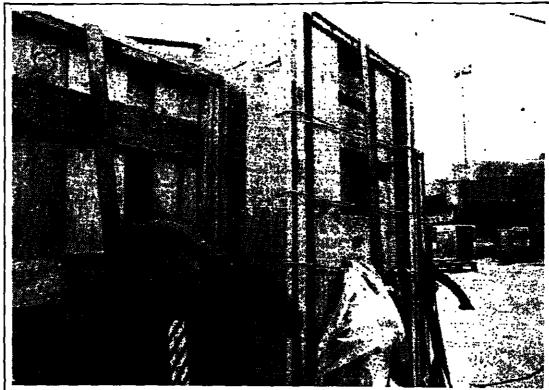

This strengthened suspicions that Pretoria was planning its own "internal" solution and had abandoned the U.N. plan, drafted during two years of painstaking negotiations by the United States, Britain, France, Canada and West Germany.

Ambassador Paul Lusaka of Zambia, as president of the U.N. Council for Namibia, was due to open Wednesday's debate. The council was set up to administer the territory after the assembly voted in 1966 to terminate South Africa's old League of Nations mandate over the former German colony, but its members have never been able to enter Namibia.

Sam Nujoma, president of SWAPO, the main guerrilla group that has been battling South African rule over Namibia for the past dozen years, was also due to speak.

South Africa, already subject to mandatory arms embargo imposed by the Security Council in November 1977, has not taken part in the work of the assembly since it was suspended in November 1974 because of its racial policies.

France to freeze aid to Bokassa military pending investigation

PARIS, May 23 (R) - France is suspending military aid to the Central African Empire until results of an inquiry into an alleged massacre of children there are known, the cooperation ministry said Wednesday.

A ministry press statement said the aid would not be resumed until a commission comprising representatives of five African states. set up by the Franco-African summit which ended in the Rwanda capital of Kigali Tuesday, had made its report.

France has a mutual defense treaty with the Central African Empire, which occupies a strategically important position bordering Zaire and Chad.

The decision to withold military aid and not other forms of assistance for the time being is consistent with France's reluctance to allow its stand against reported abuses of human rights in the empire cause unnecessary suffering to the population.

French aid accounts for about half the entire national budget of the country, one of the world's poorest, whose economy is close to collapse.

Meanwhile, Bokassa's exiled eldest son, Prince Georges, Wednesday joined a chorus of outrage over the reported massacre of children, saying his compatriots were fed up with father. In an interview with the pro-Socialist French newspaper "Le-Matin," Georges said, "people are fed up with my father, they have had enough."

The 29-year-old prince said France could end his father's reign

"If the French government dropped him, it would be over for him," he said.

Georges has lived in exile in Paris since he was expelled with his wife and children from Bangni. capital of the empire, by his father last September. At the time he said he had been sent away because his father felt he might interfere in the emperor's widespread commercial affairs.

Georges told "Le Matin" that most of the emperor's 30 children, aged between five and 19, were living in Switzerland. One of his two brothers still living in Bangui had taken part in the demonstrations last month and had been detained.

He said he did not want to talk about the massacre because he did not want to play into the opposition's hands. But, he said, "there are people who saw what hapsened and who told me about it. There is no possible doubt."

Confirming an Amnesty International report, the Central African Empire's ambassador to France said here Tuesday that about 100 children had been killed by Bokassa's security guards in January and April.

Bokassa denied the accusation, saying riot victims earlier this year were "grown-up youths." According to Georges, a popular revolt could topple his father.

"He is finished. The atmosphere has changed over the last six months. Before, people were terrorized. Now they dare to speak out and demonstrate," he said.

U.S. judges save killers from chair

Unrest in India's police

spreads to six provinces

STARKE, Fla. May 23 (Agencies) - The executions of condemned murderers John A. Spenkelink and Willie Jasper Darden Jr. were postponed by federal judges hours before both men were to die Wednesday.

Spenkelink's reprieve came only hours before his 7a.m. execution in the electric chair. He was granted stays by two judges, acting independently. U.S. Circuit Court Judge Elbert P. Tuttle of Atlanta ordered the execution postponed late Tuesday night, and U.S. Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall granted a stay early Wednesday

Spenkelink's execution was postponed at least until the full Supreme Court — which has rejected his appeals four times before — could consider the case Thursday.

Darden won his temporary reprieve from U.S. District Judge William T. Hodges in Tampa, who ruled that Darden must be given time to appeal in the courts.

Justice Marshall acted after two other Supreme Court judges had refused to grant a stay and almost every avenue of appeal had been Spenkelink, who had been due to go to the chair in the Florida State Prison at Railford, would have been the first American to be executed in two years.

His lawyers, supported by his mother and hundreds of antideath penalty campaigners, had made last-minute efforts to find a Supreme Court judge prepared to stay the execution order. But by midnight their chances appeared bleak after two rejections.

Then they went to Justice Marshall who cited the fact that all nine members of the court would meet together within 36 hours be dealt with.

Justice Marshall said he felt it

But Vance and officials accompanying him made it clear the United States has no plans to join Britain in sending an envoy to Salisbury, and that President Jimmy Carter will make an independent determination on the validity of Bishop Abel Muzorewa's new government. The Senate has urged the Carter administration to recognize the new Rhodesian government, which is violently opposed by Communist-armed guerrillas.

Lord Carrington, who saw Vance after receiving what amounted to a warning from Commonwealth envoys not to recognize the Salisbury administration, declared: "...Our belief is transformed the situation there." Asked if the United States held a similar view, Vance replied, "There is a new reality and we must recognize there is a new reality. However, we still have to review the entire situation before the president makes his determination."

Pressed by reporters, Vance said he agreed with the British a decision to send an envoy to Salisbury.

Lord Carrington, standing beside Vance on the steps of the Foreign Office, identified the envoy as Undersecretary Derek Day, 51, who will leave for Rhodesia next week.

It is the first time since the United States and Britain's Labor government announced a joint plan on Rhodesia that a senior British envoy has gone to Salisbury without a U.S. official.

The Anglo-American plan sought to bring Salisbury's black and white leaders and the guerrilla chiefs to agree on a cease-fire, the dispatch of a United Nations peacekeeping force, and an internationally acceptable power transfer from whites to blacks in which the guerrillas would have a key.

GLOBAL FAILURE

The International Energy Agency concluded a two-day meeting Tuesday talking about insufficient energy supplies through next year for meeting moderate economic growth in the industrialized world. In Washington, meanwhile, U.S. Deputy Energy Secretary John O'Leary was telling a congressional committee that world production is now coming roughly in balance with daily crude oil demand.

If Mr. O'Leary is right, and in this instance we suspect he is, then the current hysteria in the West about oil supplies should calm down. The change will not be immediate, since crude takes its time in reaching the gas stations of California and Dublin. At the moment, though, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is selling more oil than it did at this time a year ago. North Sea and North Slope production keeps edging up, not down.

But by examining consumption statistics for the West, we can imagine where the IEA is getting its ideas as well. U.S. oil imports are up 7 per cent, for example, over levels of one year ago. And Ireland's roaring growth economic policies have driven energy demand on the same upward path.

Prior to 1974, energy consumption and economic growth in the industrialized world followed each other on a one-t-one basis. This energy coefficient was a key for predicting recessions and/or oil shortages in the 1980s for several years.

Between 1975 and 1979, however, the energy coefficient changed, Economic growth in countries like Japan and Germany continued, while the U.S. economy, despite the huge trade deficits, continued to act as the " train " for pulling the rest of the industrialized world out of its slump. Energy consumption increased, but at levels well below economic growth.

We are now back to the one-to-one ratio days, and whatever wisdom was implied by the change during the last four years seems to have been illusory. Growth once again means more big gulps of energy, and the disaster scenarioists are back with a a vengeance.

The world clearly cannot support this sort of economics any longer. The alternatives to oil have simply not been developed yet, and the only way to prod the West into getting on with that job seems to be by making oil prohibitively expensive. The elemental lesson of energy conservation has yet to be learned, and learned well, anywhere in the world. The efficiency of energy consumption in the world is appallingly bad, and it is baffling that more has not been done to improve it in the five years since oil prices made people aware of the costs of waste.

The return of production to meet demand is welcome. The return of the high energy coefficient in economic growth, however, is a testimony to a global failure.

Giving Cambodians a home

By Richard Nations

"We are all condemned to die - not to see you again. Don't worry about me. I will follow my destiny hoping only that you will be healthy and happy.

This stoic yet desperate farewell was written by a Cambodian mother stung by betrayal. After years of separation under the Khmer Rouge, she had finally discovered her son at the U.N. refugee camp in the Thai border town of Aranyaprathet.

Their reunion proved a painful illusion. In the predawn hours of April 12, she, along with 1,700 other newly arrived refugees from Cambodia, were ordered by the Thai army to board trucks for a long joinney. They were to be transported, they were told, from their temporary shelter at Wat Koh to a permanent camp in Trat, 100 miles to the south.

They never arrived. Instead, they were abandoned on the frontier to begin a four-day trek through the mountainous jungles of war-ravaged Cambodia, under armed escort and with inadequate

"We have tried to escape from death in search of life," Toeung wrote her son. "Why have we now encountered misery even worse than ever before? I have never had enough to eat. I lost one daughter.

If only I could see you every day my sorrow would be bearable."

Toeung's letter is just one of many that have reached Thailand from this group. Refugee officials consider it authentic. All the letters speak of harsh deprivation, the grief of losing close relatives, and the shock and anguish of returning to Cambodia after finally reaching

Furthermore, the 1,700 from Wat Koh are not the only Cambodian refugees to have been returned to the horror of their homeland. Informed Western refugee officials suspect that these are but a fraction of the innocent and helpless victims of the Cambodian war whom the world appears increasingly determined to shove out of

The same day this group was forced to march through Cambodian jungles, President Carter's coordinator for refugees, former Sen. Dick Clark, was holding official talks in Bangkok. His departure statement read: "Given the confused situation in Cambodia, I was particularly gratified by Prime Minister Kriangsak Chamanan's clear assurances that the Thai government would allow Cambodian refugees temporary asylum in Thailand and that no refugees would be turned back against their will."

Thai officials say privately that the country no longer can afford the liberal refugee policy of the past as the tides of famine and war in Cambodia threaten Thailand's own national security.

Western analysts tend to support Thai fears that several hundred thousand Cambodians could flood into Thailand by late July. Recently nearly 4,000 refugees — including soldiers of the deposed Pol Pot government riding nine elephants — crossed into southeastern Trad province, according to reports from the border area. They were disarmed and taken back to Cambodia by Thai authorities the following day. More than 10,000 Cambodians have entered Thailand in a recent three-day period, according to various reports reaching here. Some were accommodated in camps, and others were turned back.

Many of the refugees are women and children who said they ate wild bark and mushrooms to survive. The Vietnamese offensive against the Khmer Rouge has prevented the spring planting in western Cambodia, Both Vietnamese and Cambodian soldiers are battling for the last harvest, and even now the people are said to be eating the seeds set aside for sowing.

The Thais have been criticized for abandoning their humane policy of the past. "But no one else is rushing to give the Cambodians a home," one military source said. "If the United Nations could the refugees that arrive here in a reaso niarantee to remove al amount of time we would let them in. But since no other country is willing to carry these people away, we must do so ourselves." Nor have the paradoxical Jessons to Malaysia's hard-line policy that all but sealed its shores to Vietnamese "boat people" last November been lost on the Thais.

"It was not until many Vietnamese drowned just off the Malaysian coast in front of western television cameras that the West took notice of their tragedy and responded to Malaysia's dilemma," a government official commented privately.

Although the Thai policy is to return newly arrived refugees to Cambodia, they say they intend to use more persuasion than force. Military sources say they will provide the refugees with adequate provisions plus the seeds and tools to plant a crop.

The Thais also say refugees will not be forced across the border into areas controlled by the Khmer Rouge, who reportedly brutally liquidate even ordinary villagers suspected as enemy infiltrators. Refugees will be put back in safe areas, under the control either of the Vietnames forces, or of neither side.

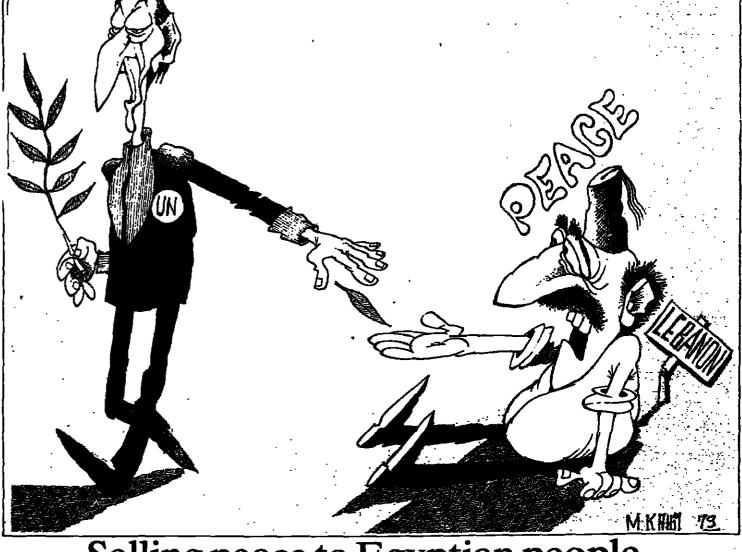

Since the two sides in Cambodia are fighting as much for control of population as territory, some observers here suspect that there may be some understanding between the Thais and Vietnamese to funnel the large flows of refugees into Vietnamese-controlled areas.* In Hanoi's eyes this might be a friendly gesture which would help offset the safe conduct through Thai territory allowed to Khmer Rouge forces escaping the Vietnamese.

Although the 1,700 from Wat Koh have not been led into massacre, they appear to have been left in a desolate no man's land with little defense against wilderness and the war.

One group says they are under the escort of the anti-Communist guerrillas of former Premier Lon Nol who are operating in an insecure area, often caught in the cross fire between the Vietnamese and the Khmer Rouge.

"Living here deprives me of the most basic necessities of life, a man wrote his uncle. "We are living without cooking utensils, without rice, without salt, without money. At this moment I am condemned to live with starvation." (AP)

Selling peace to Egyptian people

By Elias Antar

Anwar Sadat is determined to convince Egyptians that peace brings happiness and plenty, and inhabitants of El Arish will be told that when the town returns to Egyptian rule this weekened after 12 years of Israeli occupation.

The Egyptian president will personally attend the extravaganza at the Sinai capital, accompanied by his retinue, 1,000 guests and attendent hoopla, including the release of 10,000 colored balloons

The guest list includes almost the entire Egyptian Parliament, although its 360 members are now out of job pending new elections next month. There will also be 100 veterans wounded in four wars with Israel, 20 students from a school that was bombed by the Israelis in 1970, and union leaders.

The whole Egyptian cabinet under Prime Minister Mustapha Khalil will also descend on El Arish to mark its return to Egyptian

The newspaper "Al Ahram" says Sadat will be handed a large Egyptian flag by four servicemen and then, after it is kissed by leading guests and dignitaries, will be raised atop the tailest flagpole in Egypt.

The ceremony on Saturday will be televised live in Egypt and

The ceremony on Saturday will be televised live in Egypt and and witnessed the separate peace treaty proving for the return of El Arish to the Egyptians.

On Sunday, Sadat will meet with Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin and U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance in El Arish for speech-making and some private talking. The three will then helicopter to Bersheeba, in the Negev Desert, for more celebrations and later will inaugurate an air corridor between the two countries. The publicizing of the return of El Arish has several aims. First, Sadat wants to demonstrate to the Egyptians that under the treaty he concluded, the Israelis really are pulling out of Egyptian territory, even though the complete evacuation of Sinai is not due for three

Most Arab states have bitterly rejected the treaty, saying it does nothing for the Palestinians or occupied Jerusalem.

When the television cameras zoom in on the Star of David going down and red, white and black Egyptian banner going up, the Egyptians will be trying to show the Arabs that other territory still occupied by Israel could also be regained through negotiations if they join the peace process.

And Sadat's meeting with Begin, expected to be publicly effu-sive, is designed to show his Arab critics that he is going ahead with normalization of relations regardless. To Israeli moderates, Sadat will be sending a signal that they can expect even more from him if they can persuade Begin to compromise on the issue of Palestinian autonomy.

Negotiations on autonomy will start Friday in Bersheeba, after the actual handover of El Arish takes place at noon between military officers. At that moment, newly-printed Egyptian pounds will replace Israeli currency.

But meanwhile, a cornucopia of staples will be unloaded on the 45,000 people of El Arish, a sleepy Mediterranean town whose main occupation is fishing. "We want to make a splash when we come in to help them celebrate, and also to show them we are better than the Israelis," said one official in Cairo.

"We want to flood the El Arish market with food and staples at first, no ration cards, no restraints," said north Sinai Governor Muhammad Hussein Shawkat, whose administration will move in on Friday.(AP)

Assessing America's trade position

By Nicholas Von Hoffman

WASHINGTON -

The America that Masayoshi Ohira visited recently isn't as anti-Japanese as it was 40 years ago, but it is growing increasingly unfriendly toward this Asian prime minister's homeland. In the 1930s merchandise stamped with "made in Japan" meant cheap junk dumped on the American market at the expense of American jobs.

There's nothing cheap about the Datsuns and the Nikons and the Sonys but the conviction spreads that Americans are paying for these items in more than yen; the belief is fastening itself on American that those trinkets are costing jobs and wealth.

The jobs argument Americans have heard many times before; the complaint about wealth is new. It is only recently that respectable types have started to point out that Americans very nearly have a balanced trade relationship with the Arab world, that is with people from whom they buy oil. The foreign trade deficit isn't for the Arabs, but to nations like Japan.

This has provoked a number of business types to complain that Americans are being made chumps of by their major trading partners. Hence "Forbes" magazine (May 14) declares: "The simple fact is that the other developed nations have financed their petro-deficits largely by exporting to the U.S. The Arabs handed them a padded bill and they have stuck the U.S. with it,"

In other words, to pay for Arab oil the Germans, the Japanese, the French and the rest of em are selling into the U.S. market for a profit. That doesn't square with the repeated accusations these countries are dumping "excess" production onto the American market in order to keep factories and workers busy at home. If they're dumping and selling at a loss, they can't be skimming off a profit.

Or can they? "Forbes" quotes a leading economist testifying before Congress as saying. "Our trading partners are shifting their oil deficits back on us. They see us as the leaders of the Free World, the lenders of last resort, the employers of last resort, we're everything to them. don't you see?"

What can be seen is that men you'd never expect it from are wondering if America's world-circling imperium may be costing more than it's earning. The contradictions in various arguments against U.S. current trade policies isn't so important as that they're world. People are thinking about surrendering a degree of political control over nations like Mr. Ohira's Japan in exchange for a higher profit margin.

That's what a conservative chap like Texas's Sen. Lloyd Bentsen means when he wonders aloud that, "For too long we've negotiated for the country on trade matters with 90 per cent of our decisions based on geopolitical objectives and 10 per cent on economic selfinterest. We thought we were so wealthy. But that day is past, It's time for us to do some very tough, pragmatic dealing that asks the question: What's in this for the United States?" Not much, say many, as the value of international free trade comes under critical judgement by all sorts in the U.S. society. Proselytizing for free trade is becoming something only doctrinaire free market people do. Until after World War II free trade was seldom advocated by American businessmen in the technologically-advanced industries. Farmers were for low import duties, not factory owners or the Republican Party. From Grant's time forward, the Grand Old Party repudiated the idea that American manufactures should be forced to compete unprotected against foreign merchandise. The Democrat Cleveland lost the presidency because he advocated reducing import duties and the Republican McKinley first came to national prominence by writing a tariff law of Alpine altitude.

Only after World War II did the United States open up its enormous markets to outsiders and then it was done because the United States had virtually all the money in the world and unless it parted with some of it Europe would assuredly collapse and go Red. The economic reasons for an unrestricted, unsubsidized, unregulated world free market are as good or as bad as they are for uncontrolled laissez-faire at home. Which is to say, it may not be profitable for the U.S. as a society to practice free trade. The other pluses which flow from free trade - world political power, the exchange of ideas, tastes and values that go with the exchange of goods, friendship and alliance - may not seem to be enough in a narrowing world. A concerned and anxious America may not care to be part of free international competition; it may elect to go with grand - and great-grandfather and declare that free enterprise competition stops at the water's edge. # saudi press review

"Prince Salman's visit to the U.K. and his talks with Mrs. Thatcher were a continuation of the Saudi diplomatic activity at all levels," according to Medina". The paper said that "soon after the United States abandoned plans to work for a just and comprehensive peace in the region, it became necessary to mobilize the resources of other countries and persuade them to adhere to a just plan for peace. "Saudi diplomacy is working hard to take advantage of every opportunity for contacts and consultations with other Arab and friendly countries to win support for the Arab stand. For it is obvious that Saudi Arabia realizes that a separate peace treaty has not advanced the cause of peace but has damaged it and it is anxious that no more harm is done to the Arabs and their rights".

"Begin has succeeded in muzziing Sadat and forcing him to abandon Palestinian rights in the occupied lands. As Begin becomes more arrogant about this issue. Sadat continues to toe the line," "Al-Riyadh" said.

"But Sadat may have started to realize that he has taken a plunge into the unknown and seems to have been lost -- not saved -- by the treaty he signed with Israel. In due course he will discover this fact and the sordid results of his policy which merely consolidate Israeli occupation of Arab lands." "The soundness of Arab attitudes towards the separate peace treaty is verified almost "Al-Nadwa" şaid. daily "

"Although we have known all along of Israel's real intentions in the occupied areas, Israeli leaders leave no stone unturned in their constant revelation of their designs and their determination to carry them out. Begin's statements made in Tel Aviv and London go a long way in persuading anybody who cares to listen to the aggressive, expansionist program of his government. One can visualize the state of negotiations between a usurper who claims that the land he occupies is a liberated one and a party that possesses no strength of any kind and no authority to negotiate."

"The Israeli plan for autonomy in the West Bank and Gaza merely confirms that Israel has no intention to respond to mediation and appeals to allow the Palestinians to determine their own future," "Okaz" said.

"This calls for an international confrontation to put an end to Israel's illusions. The Arabs should point out the dangers of such a catastrophic scheme which shows that Israel intends to mex the occupied lands permanently.'

Analyzing the situation in Israel, "Al-Bilad" said that the country "is practically paralyzed by strikes and economic chaos. "The 'promised land' has proved to be fallow despite concerted Israeli propaganda efforts to lure more immigrants. Reasons for this are many and varied," the paper said. "They include: "The high rate of inflation and subsequent unemployment; - "The dwindling value of the Israeli lira: - Progressive taxation and the tax laws themselves:

- Police state methods in checking on citizens; - Rising number of working hours while wages remain fixed; - Growing feeling of insecurity because of the Palestinian resistance: Feelings of isolation which permeate the immigrants: "Add to this the moral degen-eration of the Israeli society which will be the front gate for the destruction of the community however hard the government tries to control it. Destruction will come from inside, and we shall witness it soon," the paper said. In a letter to the mayor of Riyadh, a commentator in "Al-Jezirah" deplored the sudden spurt of land allotments to the landless before preparations were complete for providing basic services. The writer said that thousands of people were notified through the press that they were granted lands by the government but the areas given away had no water or electricity. Although it would be possible to buy water by tank trucks - however high the price - it would not be possible to have electricity.

Several newspapers commented on the royal visit to Morocco. "Okaz" said that the visit and the talks "reaffirm the Arab people's ability to stand up to Zionist challenges which try to undermine peace and perpetuate occupation of the Arab lands.

"The Arabs have considerable resources which can be mobilized in pursuit of their aims for a just peace and have shown commendable willingness to use them."

Silence. Work in progress. (Okaz)

How they beat the heat before air-conditioning

JEDDAH - It is difficult to imagine how people survived in very hot countries like Saudi Arabia without refrigeration and airconditioning. But Arabs of the era before these modern inventions took over had ways and means of beating the heat. Not for them the furnace-like boxes of concrete, steel and glass. Their homes were built as havens of Traditional Arab architecture had many ways of keeping the intense summer heat out and letting the cool breezes in. House walls were very thick. The houses themselves were usually built around a courtyard, which often had a fountain and shady trees. Floors might be made of cool flagstones or tiles, and ceilings were generally high. In some areas there were clever wind traps, or towers, on the roof, with ventilation shafts carrying the cool air through the house.

Air circulation was always the prime consideration. Windows would either be many small holes in the thick walls, or large and covered with louvred shutters or ornately-carved wooden screens. These were all ways of letting the air in, but keeping the

Between rooms were screened openings to create a through draught and the central courtyard, besides being a shady place to sit, allowed the hot air to escape upwards. The flat roof was another cool spot. All the family would sleep on it in the summer. The roof tops then were roughly all the same height, so no one blocked off the cool night breezes from his neighbor. There might even be a small room on the roof with shuttered windows all round to provide a shaded, breezy day-time refuge from the heat of summer.

As well as pools and fountains in the courtyard, water played a part in the cool scene about the mountains, built special ships to house. It was sprinkled on the bring in the ice cargos packed in stone floors. Large earthenware jars of water stood by the windows to moisten and cool the incoming air. Damp mats hung by the wind traps on the roof. But, what about the refreshing cold drinks and ices made available to modern man through refrigeration?

In fact, the Arabs were enjoying ice cream long before the Western world. They discovered it by adapting methods of storing ice developed in ancient China. The Crusaders later learnt the secret from the Arabs and took it back to the West.

The Arabs started a trade in ice and snow, importing it from the mountains of Lebanon. The ice was carried by camel and packed in salt to stop it melting on the way. Now it is moved by refrigerated trucks, thundering along the desert highroads.

You need dependable power for your irrigation system you need the best parts and service too... Zahid Tractor gives you both.

Why accept less than proven Caterpillar dependability? The pump engine may cost only 5% of your total system ... but, the system is 100% dependent upon the engine.

Any powered imgation system—well pump, booster pump, flood, drip feed or overhead sprinkler-can only be as dependable as its pump engine. And since engine failure can mean crop failure, minimise that risk by installing engines of proven dependability—Caterpillar engines. They range from 85-1,000hp. So whatever your flow requirement, these engines can handle it-efficiently, economically and dependably.

Designed for hot, dry conditions Developed to power Cat-built machines on heavy-duty operations in all kinds of conditions. Cat engines owe their reliability to many advanced design, metallurgical and engineering factors. And special features ensure that these engines can pump efficiently over long periods in hot, dusty conditions with little attention.

High efficiency cooling options

Big capacity radiators maintain correct engine operating temperature in most desert conditions. For extremely high ambient temperatures engine-mounted heat exchangers can be fitted—to dissipate excess heat through the imigation system's water supply.

Little Maintenance

Like its fuel system, the engine is designed to save maintenance time—by reducing servicing points and simplifying adjustment procedures. Highly effective lubricating systems, total hardened crankshafts and long-life rotating valves preclude many common wear and adjustment problems. Other service-saving features include externally mounted oil pumps, quick-change spin-on oil and fuel filters, and simple, easy access valve adjustment.

We know Saudi Arabia and your working conditions, we have the parts and maintenance facilities to keep your machines working efficiently and dependably. Our skilled and highly trained maintenance staff use the most up-to-date equipment to repair and overhaul your machine in our workshops or at your site saving you days, even weeks of downtime. ## Renewed interest in private education

Public funds to aid U.S. private schools?

By Auriol Stevens

After years of decline, the oportion of American children tending private schools has egun to risc. In 1977/8, figures show that 3.3 per cent of all children ttended them. In 1976 the umber had reached 9.7 per cent om 13 per cent in 1965.

With "renewed interest" in priate education, as the deputy ommissioner for non-public eduation, Ed d'Alessio, puts it, there s growing pressure for public noney to be made available to selp it. Public school protagonists ear that money will be sucked out of the public system.

D'Alessio's appointment to a newly-created post in the federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare is a victory for the private school campaigners — a concession by the Carter administration to buy off a move to introduce tax credits for families paying fees at private schools and colleges.

Ninety per cent of the children attending private schools in the United States attend church schools. Under the constitution such schools cannot directly receive public money but as a result of pressure families whose children attend such schools have recently been made eligible for federal aid programs.

There is now a strong move to extend this principle of helping families by introducing a meanstested voucher which could be used at either public or private schools. An organization known as CHOICE is campaigning to get the voucher scheme onto the ballot papers in California in 1980 or

The private sector which generates this growing support has been changing in recent years.

Many Catholic schools have closed in recent years and they now make up 70 per cent of the private schools. New secular schools or Jewish and Evangelical Christian schools are filling the Many are elementary schools, many cater for minority ethnic groups and many are relatively cheap. The proportion of black children in privatee schools is about half that in public schools but the proportion of other ethnic groups is roughly the same.

Around 10 per cent of families paying school fees have an annual income below the national average. School fees range from around $ 650 a year to well over $ 4,000 for the smartest east coast day schools.

Professor Donald Erickson. director of the Centre for Research on Private Education at San Francisco University, attributes the growing support for private schools to parents' resentment at growing government and legal interference in the local control of public schools.

Many parents feel their neighnorhood schools are not responsive to them any more.

"Egalitarianism has run rampant and people feel that this quest for making everyone equal is robbing us of our liberty; that it will make this a country where none of us have any choices any Parents are also, he says, worried at indiscipline and violence in the public schools, but race is not, he says, a serious factor. "We find the private schools are often more integrated than the public schools in the areas from which the children come.

Chanoch Shudofsky, a director of the Council for American Private Education, one of the leading pressure groups, drew attention to an apparently growing wish among minority groups to retain cultural identity.

This cultural separatism is seen by Robert Alioto, superintendent of San Francisco's public schools, as a major threat to the American tradition of "bringing together dif-ferent races in public schools in the United States."

Michael Fay, head of the Institute of Teacher Leadership in Los Angeles, is one of many commentators who sees attempts to integrate the schools as the main stimulus for private education, particularly in the Los Angeles

When a court-ordered busing program was introduced last September, 70 per cent of the children due to be bused from a junior high school in the highly desirable San Fernando valley, left the school.

Many of them went to West Valley Neighborhood School, which was started from scratch in September in buildings rented from a summer camp. The school was started by a group of parents and now has 320 pupils aged 10 to 14. Fees are $ 1,200 a year. The staff, almost all married women, are paid about half the going rate in the city's public schools.

The head, Ted Obiatt, agrees that busing provided the catalyst but firmly believes that he has converted most of the parents to the virtues of private education for its own sake. "They are not rednecks, they are really interested in education," he said, though he is aware that some of the parents are delighted at the absence of minority faces."

Bridgemount High School, an Evangelical school of 165 15-to-18 year olds, is at present housed on the sixth floor of a San Francisco office building. It was started in 1965 "because of concern at deterioration in the public schools." Both cuts in education programs and "erosion of the moral climate" fuelled this con-

Bridgemount offers students a curriculum which is very considerably narrower than that available in the city's public schools. There is strong concerntration on basic English and maths and test results are well above average - though only average children or above are accepted in the first place.

The expense of providing secondary education to a standard which will achieve recognition for college entrance in the United States is high. Good specialist teachers are in short supply and private schools offer salaries which are not usually more than two thirds the current level in public schools. As a result 60 per cent of all private school pupils are in elementary schools.

The attraction of private elementary schools is illustrated by Live Oak School in San Francisco. In a city where any school of less than 300 is regarded as small and the largest elementary school has 1200 pupils, this slightly ramshackle, parent-run school with 50 children aged from 41/2 to 11 seems comfortingly personal. — ment figures are meaningless. The overwhelming majority of school-leavers cannot find jobs and cannot be registered as tinemployed or receive any dole until they have been in employment. Children who work on the family farm cannot register.

One nine-year-old boy on a three hectare, five-cow mini-farm told me that he hoped to become a student at Lisbon University. His mother, who runs a tiny cooperative milking parlor, said immediately: "That is impor to prepare to inherit the farm."

The Minister of Agriculture, of living has not kept pace. In Professor Vaz Portugal, says the only answer to the problem of the fragmented farm structure of the north is cooperation. The population here is conservative, both politically and agriculturally, but the cooperatives are beginning to win them over by results, however poor by European standards.

South of the Tagus the problem is very different. This is the "alenyearly bonuses and welfare tejo," the land of enormous benefits added, real wages do not estates of thousands of hectares, mainly wheat and cereals but with some cattle and pig herds, and the profitable cork-oaks. It is a sundrenched arid area where the former estate owners, often companies or absentee proprietors, pread moves to slash the work spent little on irrigation or other investment. The wages of the workers were abysmally low. In the first 18 months of the revolution, the land workers, led by the Communist-controlled trade unions, transformed 480 estates, one million hectares, one-fifth of the land of Portugal, into collectives. In typical Portuguese style, there was little violence: the estate owners were either not there to resist or, where there was resistance, the "occupying forces" just went away and tried the next farm. Many owners had taken action in anticipation of collectivization by selling off farm machinery and slaughtering livestock, leaving the incoming occupiers with bankrupt and neglected holdings.

The trade union controlling the collectivization compounded the problems by insisting that each estate take on some of the local unemployed or workers who had previously been displaced by new machinery.

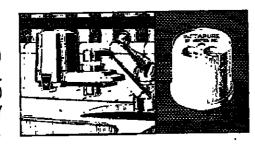

The result is that the collectives are hopelessly overmanned, as well as lacking management and technical experience. The workers have benefited because their wages have doubled, but they are literally eating the seed corn and in some cases stripping the cork-bark years in advance of ripening. The agrarian reform, which has been a touchstone of Portugese politics since Salazar, has notably failed. The present Government's attempt to return some proportion of the collectivised land to former owners is meeting with political and physical resistance and little agricultural success. (OFNS)

Cruyff mellows, signs for L.A. for $1m a year

LOS ANGELES, May 23 (R)

— Dutch soccer star Johan Cruyff, who has resisted offers from half the world's clubs, will make his North American Soccer League debut with the Los Angeles Aztecs here Wednesday night after signing a long-term contract with the club Tuesday.

Cruyff, who spent five years with Spanish club Barcelona after playing for Ajak Amsterdam for nine years, refused to give details of his contract except to say "I am always highly paid."

But team officials said the contract would make him the highest-paid player in North America and added privately he could earn close to a million dollars a year because a percentage of gate receipts will make up part of his salary. .

Cruvff flew in here from Amsterdam Tuesday and told a crowded press conference he had not played seriously since

He added he would play his first match Wednesday night against the Rochester Lancers, but he would have to work hard to get into shape.

Cruyff's decision to sign with os Angeles renews his ties with is former coach, Rinus Michels, why joined the Aztecs earlier this year after coaching Ajax for six seasons and Barcelona for four.

Cruyff played two exhibition games with the New York Cosmos ast year but said he decided to come to the West Coast because

The Aztecs, who have five wins and two losses, have been attracting only 5,000 to 10,000 spectators at their games this season. "I think we can build up the gate to 20,000 by the end of this season," Cruyff said. In preparation for Wednesday night he was given an orange and red Aztec Jersey with the figures '14" which will be his team

Michels told reporters: "Cruyff is a top — he is undoubtedly the Pele of Europe. Taking into consideration that he is 32, he is already in very good shape."

Cruyff's North American agent, Charles Taylor, said Cruyff will be the highest-paid player in North America whether or not he increases the gate attendance. "He is already a millionaire and he will be earning a lot more money bere." he said.

Taylor said he had negotiated with the Cosmos for 18 months on the question of Cruyff joining them. He refused to say why the negotiations ended, but added: 'Cruyff just loves to be on the West Coast and simply feels he could do more for soccer here."

Asked whether the contract could be ended at the end of each season, Taylor said: "Cruyff.wants. to play here so there is no reason why the contract should be

Aztec Club President Larry Friend told reporters: "I am confident that with Cruyff, the Aztecs will be one of the powers of the North American football world for a long time to come. Los Angeles will now be the showcase for the top player of the world."

Cruyff did not play for the Netherlands in the World Cup finals in Argentina, but he was the hero of the Dutch side in the finals in West Germany.

NEW YORK, May 23 (R) — New York Cosmos Italian striker Giorgio Chinaglia, who received an award on Sunday for his contribution to American soccer, celebrated by scoring two goals in his side's 3-1 win over the Tulsa Roughnecks. He is the North American Soccer League's (NASL) leading scorer this season with 11 goals in 12 matches, and last season netted a record 34 goals. But despite that he is regularly booed by his home fans, who seem to enjoy taunting him because of his success.

Yugoslav midfielder Vladislav Bogicevic smiled when asked if the Cosmos were making a special effort on Sunday to get the ball to Chinaglia, "We're always looking

The Cosmos, aiming for its third consecutive NASL championship, has the best record in the League with eight wins to one defeat. But it had some bad news at the weekend when former West German international Franz Beckenbauer injured his right knee in practice. He missed Sunday's DUBLIN, May 23 (R) — A mistake by center-half Mick Martin set West Germany on its way to a 3-1 win over the Republic of Ireland in a friendly soccer international here Tuesday.

While the Germans can be pleased with another competent, all-round display, the defeat was a bitter blow for Irish pride, coming only three days after their 1-0 European Championship defeat by Bulgaria in Sofia.

with 1-0 win over N. Irish GLASGOW, Scotland, May 23

(R) -- Scotland beat Northern Ireland, 1-0, in the British International Championship here Tuesday night but again disappointed its supporters with another inept performance

The Scots lost 3-0 to Wales on Saturday and it was not until the 75th minute Tuesday night that they managed their first goal of the competition, Arthur Graham scoring after Irish goalkeeper Pat Jennings had beaten out Kenny Dalglish's shot.

Territorially, Scotland dominated the game but lacked the incisive finishing to win impressively. Graham alone among the forwards looked a quality player and netted again in the 89th minute. The goal was disallowed because Joe Jordan had handled. And even for Graham the night had a dreary end when he limped off injured in the dying seconds. England and Wales, the top two teams in the championship, were to meet at Wembley Wednesday. Wales plays Northern Ireland, which now suffered two defeats, on Friday and the championship ends with the England-Scotland game on Saturday.

King said the action was taken because the 11 cars involved qualified before a USAC bulletin issued before the final day of time trials "suggested" that intake exhaust pipes have a minimum inside diameter of 1.47 inches.

The Bumped drivers said that amounted to legalizing attempts to override the power restrictions and put them at a disadvantage.

The Standard size of the exhaust pipes is about 2.5 inches. By allowing a smaller opening, the wastegate valve affecting turbocharger boost overloads and forces more air pressure back into the engine. That can increase horsepower and speeds.

A vote Tuesday on a procedural issue clearly showed the House Democrals' desire for price controis to continue until October next year. They rejected a measure to prevent a vote on the continuation of controls by 153 votes

But unless both houses of Congress pass legislation against lifting controls, the president's decision to allow oil prices to rise will come into effect. The Senate at least is not expected to do so.

Presidential Press secretary Jody Powell expressed the sharp reaction of the White House to Tuesday's vote.

"Any thoughts that such votes will change the president's policy are completely misdirected," he

Sources said Iraq would not be opposed to discussing oil prices in conjunction with other commodity prices at a separate conference later this year. One suggestion was that such a meeting be held in Paris, the sources added.

They said Iraq supported Venezuela's view that the subject was divisive to the Third World at the present UNCTAD meeting which is trying to obtain trade concessions from the rich industrialized

New Uganda regime cites improvements in foreign reserves

KAMPALA, Uganda May 23 (AP) President Yusufu Lule said Tuesday Uganda's foreign reserves have increased to $ 14 million from $ 286,000 when his provisional government took over from deposed leader Idi Amin five weeks ago.

Lule said that as a result of steps to halt the drain of foreign exchange," the value of our currency is already starting to

The government has set an official rate of seven shillings to the U.S. dollar and has virtually halted private foreign exchange transactions at banks. On the black market, the shilling has recovered from 120 to one dollar to about 40 to a dollar.

Lule spoke to the first public session of the National Consultative Council, which has been meeting privately for two weeks. The council, soon to be expanded, is to act as a temporary legislature until elections, promised in about two vears. But Iraq did not neces-one per cent of the money supply," Lule said.

"Inflation had been escalating at an average annual rate of approximately 200 per cent, or well over 1,000 per cent over the eight-year period" of Amin's rule, he said.

He said Amin's government had no idea how to manage the economy, once among Africa's richest, and carried out deficit financing by merely printing more

Blumenthal says grand plan won't whip inflation

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP) U.S. Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal said Tuesday the administration of President Jimmy Carter has no " blockbus-ter theory " for whipping inflation, and guessed that Congress probably wouldn't go along even if such a plan were offered.

" A blockbuster may be good psychologically," Blumental told the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee on international economic policy. " But the fundamental problems of the U.S. economy lie in its long-run policies. You can't solve those with blockbusters.

Carter urges higher interest

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP) — U.S. President Jimmy Carter Tuesday urged Congress to allow U.S. savings institutions to pay higher interest rates on savings accounts held by the average depositor. He called on Congress to revise a system of federal regulation which he said "has become increasingly unfair to the small saver." The government limits the interest that banks and other savings institutions may pay depositors. High inflation rates have meant that depositors have seen the value of their savings shrink as interest rates have not compensated for the declining value of the dollar. As a result, Americans have been shifting money to shortterm government notes or spending it on goods before the price goes

Metalworkers to meet in Malta

GENEVA, May 23 (R) — Twenty leading trade unionists from six east Mediterranean countries will meet at a conference called by the International Metalworkers' Federation in Valletta, Maita, from May 28 to 30, the federation said Tuesday. Delegates from Cyprus, Greece, Israel, Lebanon, Malta and Turkey will discuss the economic and political situation in the region, and trade union work in individual countries. They will represent unions affiliated to the federation, which groups about 12.5 million workers in labor organizations in 68 countries.

WEATHER

Forecast for the next 24 hours:

Moderate weather over the northwestern and western regions, while surface winds will blow northwesterly at moderate speed. The central, eastern and northeastern regions will fall under the impact of hot weather, as surface winds blow southerly at moderate to active speed. Thick patches of clouds over the western and southwestern highlands will offer chances of a rainfall and occasional thunders-

Sea conditions will be light to moderate in the territorial waters.

San Salvador police slay fourteen

vador, May 23 (AP) - Police opened fire Tuesday on three groups of anti-government demonstrators in the vicinity of the Venezuelan Embassy in San Salvador, a government spokesman said. Fourteen people were reported killed and an undetermined number wounded.

Presidential press spokesman Col. Rafael Flores Lima said the reports that the three groups of demonstrators were trying to bring food to nine leftist militants of the Popular Revolutionary Bloc occupying the embassy.

In another development, Vinister of Education Carlos Antonio Herrera Rebollo and an unidentified body guard were shot to death at 7:40 a.m. Wednesday near the minister's home in west-

U.S. asking Soviets for SALT overflights

The United States has raised with the Soviet Union the sensitive issue of overflights of Turkey to check Soviet compliance with the second strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT II), an authoritative Western diplomat has said. So far, the source said Tuesday, the Soviets have not reacted to the proposal, which is critical because it concerns the question of which is to be signed in Vienna next month by President Jimmy Carter and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, can be adequately verified.

Three-month ban imposed on new U.S. reactors

WASHINGTON May 23 (AP) - The U.S. government, wanting to use the lessons it learned from the near-catastrophe at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant, will not issue new licences for nuclear plants for at least three months. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission also adopted a new regulation Tuesday to prohibit trans-portation of radioactive fuel through urban areas and to require precautions against hijackings or sabotage.

The commission agreed Monday to the three-month waiting period proposed by Harold Denton, director of its. Office of Nuclear Reactor Regulation.

Only one or two power plants are expected to be affected by the three-months hiatus, said Roger Boyd, director of the NRC's Division of Project Management. The commission acted as the city of Lancaster, Pa. went to court to try to halt a planned discharge of radioactive waste water from the disabled Three Mile Island plant. The city contends its drinking water could become contaminated by the discharge.

interested in getting the treaty

If the Soviets blocked Turkey could hurt seriously the chances of U.S. Senate approval of the treaty, Western sources said.

It was not known if the U.S.-Soviet talks on the issue were taking place in Moscow or Washington. But observers said the U.S. capital seemed likely since most of the final details of the new SALT accord have been tied down there.

U.S. government officials told Congress last month that, in light of the loss of two electronic listening posts in Iran, it was considering flights over Turkey to monitor Soviet missile test firings at the Baukonur site at Leninsk.

According to accounts in the Turkish press, Carter sent a three-page letter to Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit explaining the need for such flights.

Ecevit, whose country is a member of NATO, said that while he supported the strategic arms accord he would not permit the U-2 flights unless the Soviets agreed to them.

The reports said Ecevit, who has been trying to take a more even handed approach in relations with the Kremlin than previous Ankara governments, was concerned about upsetting the Krem-lin by permitting the flights.

He said May 16 that flights of U.S. spy planes within Turkish airspace would not violate Soviet sovereignty because they would not be like "past controversial flights of spy planes over Soviet

The militant anti-government Popular Revolutionary Bloc. which is holding the French and Venezuelan embassies, the Metropolitan Cathedral and numerous other Catholic churches throughout the country, claims to be a non-violent organization.

Other militant groups which have used violence in their efforts to overthrow the government of Gen. Carlos Humberto Romero, are the Farabundo Marti Popular Liberation forces, the Armed Forces of National Resistance and the People's Revolutionary Army.

After the shooting in the capital, the militants remained in the embassy, which they seized May 11, although the Venezuelan ambassador and seven other hostages escaped Sunday night. The government offered them safe conduct out of the country but they turned it down, and authorities cut off supplies of food, water and electricity to force them out.

Flores Lima claimed in a telephone interview that "the police received fire from the militants and had to return it," but this could not be confirmed independently. A spokesman for the Bloc, a leftist umbrella group of students and peasants agitating for social reforms, claimed the demonstrators were marching peacefully to take food to the militants in the embassy when police opened fire. Witnesses said a dozen demons-

There was heavy fighting in Jinotega Sunday afternoon as the Guard tried to retake it street by street, said witnesses who fled the city that night.

by military patrols, although it had official permission to enter. According to the official, the four vehicles making up the convoy were parked at the entrance to the city Tuesday afternoon awaiting a new order allowing them to a enter and help the victims. The Red Cross offices, several schools and hospitals were filled

Ford fund gives Egypt $156,000

NEW YORK, May 23 (AP)-The Ford Foundation has granted Egypt $156,000 to help pay the costs of attracting experts to the country's new economic studies.

The grant was announced in the foundation's June 1 newsletter, which also reported an allocation of $110,000 for a resident staff adviser for the group.

Bonn elects ex-Nazi president

BONN, May 23 (Agencies) — Karl Carstens, a 64-year-old rightwinger who was a member of the Nazi Party in his youth, was elected president of West Germany Wednesday. Demonstrators opposed to the appointment paraded through the streets in Nazi S. S. uniforms with breeches and jackboots. Some of the 1,200 protesters, mainly young people, carried a banner reading "No to Carstens.

No to any rehabilitation of Nazis." They were ordered by police to remove the Nazi uniforms, which are illegal. Carstens, who entered parliament only seven years ago having spent most of his career as a civil servant, won the presidency with 528 votes, an absolute majority in the 1,036-seat assembly. His opponent, Mrs Annemarie Renger of the ruling Social Democratic Party, received 431 votes. The 65 Liberals and a handful of other electors abstained.

The president has no constitutional political power, but the job carries influence and is sometimes a pointer to political change.
